

Imperfect Palin Teaches the Nation

July 15, 2009

My fellow Americans

on the right, on the left, in between, and in the GOP,

it is time for the nation to take the thorn out of Governor Palin's side.

I am going to address a situation head on, since apparently few others will.

It is the sick bullying of conservative women as blood-sport by the MSM, with the Democrats snickering and the GOP silent.

And I am going to address the Levi problem head on as well.

Please read on.

Bullying is an awful thing, as the nation recently acknowledged with Congressional hearings on the subject of bullying in school and the continued danger of it after the school day.

But with politics, bullying is ok.
But only against certain people.

Well, not any more.

At the very least,
leave the families out.

Especially when there is a young girl involved who made a mistake and admits it.

Leave her alone.
And stop pushing Levi to make a fool of himself.

From Condoleezza Rice to Michelle Bachman, and many others, the sick siren of sin is hoisted on top of these women, and who defends them ?

No one does.

Until now.

Enter Sarah Palin.

tell Sarah Palin to SDSU, only she and Meg Stapleton are willing to address this in an adult manner.
With an assist by Pamela Geller in her unique way.

In regards to the Levi problem, what we have is an immature young man and a MSM that lacks any journalistic credibility.

So as I see it, the real problem is

WHERE ARE THE GOOD MEN OF THIS NATION
WILLING TO STAND UP AGAINST EVIL
AS MANIFESTED IN THE FEEDING FRENZY AGAINST SARAH PALIN?

and

WHERE ARE THE GOOD WOMEN OF THIS NATION
WILLING TO TELL THE MEN OF THIS NATION
THAT WE AREN'T TAKING YOUR CRAP ANYMORE AND LEAVE SARAH PALIN ALONE ?

Answer: They are not on the field of battle, that's for sure.

They are watching the blood-sport from the sidelines, snickering, tsk tsk'ing

They're saying:

- "Stay above the fray",
- "Invite him over for lunch and explain things. It will go away.
And Meg, just don't keep bringing it up again and again.
It makes you look like an amateur."

So, as far as I can tell,
there are only ~~three~~ four people anywhere willing to stand up for Sarah Palin, to stand on principle:

- Sarah Palin herself,
- Meg Stapleton, and
- Pamela Geller of Atlas Shrugged
http://atlasshrugs2000.typepad.com/atlas_shrugs/2009/07/atlas-vlogs-sarah-palin-oorah.html
- and Rebecca Mansour of Conservatives-4-Palin

Now, let me ask you a question regarding this Levi thing . . .

who stands on principle ?

- Levi ?
 - the MSM ?
 - the GOP ?
- or
- Sarah Palin and Meg Stapleton, with an assist by Pamela Geller ?

Answer: you know.

Next though, a note to Levi:

Get a real job, some education, and start being a man.
Start being a father your son can respect.
And stop attacking your in-laws of the son you say you love.
You're making a fool of yourself, and it keeps getting worse.
We're sick of your immature little game.
Though you likely won't understand, I am praying for you.

On www.conservatives4palin.com, 19-year old Toki, admittedly not religious but a big proponent of justice, says, "You pray, but I choose to fight. Levi needs to back off. Right now."

I offered him a ticket to Alaska but couldn't figure out how to get it to him.

Though the whole world knows this sequence of events,
I nevertheless provide it as a backdrop for this piece.

Last summer, on August 29, 2009, my wife and I excitedly watched as Sarah Palin exploded on to the national scene.

We were in a hotel room near Grove City College waiting to watch my daughter's soccer game, and we both said, "Who the heck is Sarah Palin ?"

Well, in about 30 minutes or so, I knew exactly who Sarah Palin was and what she stood for,
from Track to Trig, and in between,
and Todd behind them all.

In essentially an instant,
I knew who Sarah Palin was (and is),
yet after 7 weeks on the campaign trail,
Peggy Noonan didn't have a clue.
And still doesn't.

Following the electric introduction in Dayton, there soon followed a Convention speech and VPOTUS debate that awakened the Reagan nation that had been hibernating since 1988 and who stirred again in 2000, only to find out winter was still roaring.

Then a Reagan prophet steps onto the scene, ignites the base in unprecedented ways,
and the GOP looks the other way while the MSM has their way.

Poppycock, I say. Rubbish.

In one recent article, reporter Robert A. George actually said that Levi's explanation on why she resigned was more honest and straightforward than what she said herself !

Quoted:

"Johnston's explanation for Palin's quitting seems to be more honest and straight-forward than Palin's own (or Stapleton's subsequent defenses).

In short, he sounds more "plain-talking common-sense" than the so-called "maverick" governor.

Like, Robert, are you kidding me ?

You actually believe that Levi Johnston knows better than Sarah Palin why she resigned?

What school of journalism did you attend ?

Just as a reminder, here is EXACTLY why she resigned:

And if you are in a hurry, here's a quick summary:

http://www.info-scroll.com/documents/resignation_reasons.pdf

Last fall, I was so moved by Sarah Palin,
I tapped out "The Sarah Palin Effect"

Here it is:

The Sarah Palin Effect

- 1 - Tell it straight and do the right thing
- 2 - Stand on principle
- 3 - The power of the people
- 4 - Work together as a team, pull your own weight. No one is better than another
- 5 - The family is the foundation of society
- 6 - Men are men and women are women – and thank God for that !
- 7 - Men and women are equal
- 8 - Babies are precious
- 9 - God is relevant and it's ok to believe he's got a plan
- 10 - Live your life as if it is an open book
- 11 - The USA is an awesome country, founded on sound principles
- 12 - It's important to study history

Other associated components of the Palin Effect

A - Personal Fitness

B - Fiscal Fitness

Now, when I penned my "effect of Sarah Palin" last fall, my first principle was

"Women rule the world", which is simply a literary extension of

"The Hand the Rocks the Cradle Rules the World" (look it up)

Translation: Mothers are the most important thing in the world, right next to fathers.

When I re-issued "The effect of Sarah Palin",
I removed "Women rule the world", since I thought that would dilute the message and people would get tripped up right off the bat.

But maybe I was wrong to take it out.

For apparently, not only does Sarah Palin have to juggle

- being Commander in Chief of the Alaska National Guard,
- building a natural gas pipeline,
- trying to get oil drilling in ANWR, and
- dealing with anklebiters who continue to waste valuable resources (their own)
- etc. etc. etc.

but she also has to teach the nation,
and in fact, the world,

how to handle a situation with an immature kid who can't control himself and an MSM who can't stop frothing at the mouth.

Most of us would handle this with a little less class than the Palins.

I give them credit not only FOR remaining above the fray, but also for not backing down to a bully.
A bully called the MSM.

Thank you Sarah Palin,

- for standing on principle
- for being willing to risk your career for a higher calling
- for fighting for energy independence and doing something about it
- and for remaining classy in the midst of a storm.

May God continue to bless you and your family.

Bill in Baltimore

P.S.

I am a barbarian at www.conservatives4palin.com. Go there to find out more.

I am the sole author of this piece and it is authorized only by me.

And it was done with only one other guide - my conscience.

P.P. S.

Although, when you get right down to it, the opposite effect of what you might think is happening from the onslaught against Sarah Palin is occurring, that is

- if they ignore her or dismiss her, her supporters grow stronger,
- if they attack her, her supporters grow explosively,
- if they join her, her supporters grow exponentially.
